Conditions and Considerations	—
Brief Activity Description	This spring we are launching Dolphin Radio and in the fall we are offering a 1-unit practicum course open to all majors who are interested in participating in the radio production. To provide a robust experience for the student and to engage with the community, we would like to bring in Kim Gregory, Communication Specialist here at CI with over 20 years in radio production expertise. Her vast knowledge of the industry will help student contextualize their academic experience. We would like to offer Ms. Gregory $750 for 3 separate 2-hour guest lectures.
Learning Outcomes and Relation to IRA to Course Offerings	COMM491: Radio Practicum introduces students to the history of broadcast radio, current laws regarding copyright and media distribution and radi station operations. It also prepares students for participation in Dolphin Radio such as voice training, storytelling and podcast creation through the and practical application. Ms. Gregory's presentation will help students meet the following course learning outcomes: 1. Identify and analyze current media laws 2. Identify and develop radio voice and personality through oral interpretation and communication of community-focused content 3. Build technological capability in programming, equipment and podcasting 4. Demonstrate appropriate communication behaviors in the context of a college radio station
Description of Assessment Process	Students will be required to write an assessment of each speaker session linking the guest lectures to other course discussions and content.
