Faculty Development
2014-15 Call for Proposals

Proposals due Friday, October 31, 2014.

The Center for Multicultural Engagement offers support to faculty who would like to enhance the multicultural perspectives they engage in teaching, mentoring, program development, and research. We are accepting proposals for projects that might include:

1. Researching appropriate multicultural perspectives for a particular course and revising a syllabus accordingly
2. Partnering with faculty across disciplines in research and/or teaching to enhance your ability to engage greater multicultural perspectives for students
3. Developing a mentoring program for underserved or first-generation students
4. Augmenting a program already in place through further research and skill development
5. Research about multicultural perspectives in your field to write or revise a piece for publication
6. Research and implementation of any other creative ways to engage multicultural perspectives.
7. Purchasing materials for a project that increases students’ multicultural perspectives.

Proposals of no more than 3 pages should include succinct descriptions of research and implementation plans with timeline and deliverables no later than May 23rd, 2015. If projects include revising a syllabus, piece of research, or current program, please submit a copy of the work to be revised as an addendum to your proposal.

Proposals are due Friday, October 31, 2014.

Stipends may range from $200 to $2000.

Please submit proposals to Centers Coordinator:
