New Art Exhibit on Hawaii's Humpback Whales

The Art Program will host a new exhibit "Caring for Calves: The art and science of understanding Hawaii's humpback whales" Jan. 27 through Feb. 25 in the art gallery of Napa Hall. Exhibit hours are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. A public reception will be held Thursday, Jan. 27 from 6 to 8 p.m.

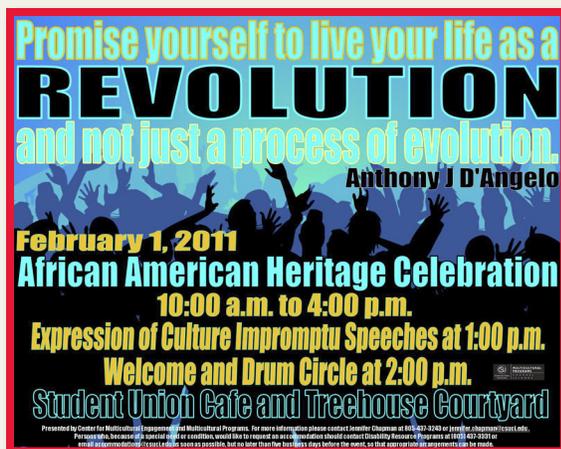

The exhibit will include photographic work by:

- CI faculty: Dr. Blake Gillespie, Assistant Professor of Chemistry, and Dr. Rachel Cartwright, Biology Lecturer
- CI students: J. Blair, R. Cano, A. Domingo, T. Dominicello, H. Martin, C. Mehlberg, L. Nguyen, A. Wall, B. Warmuth, A. Bonneau, L. Armstrong, K. Eden, J. Remonida, J. Perez, J. Warren, J. Penland, I. Espinoza, B. Villalta
- John Cesere and Dan Cesere - photographers and founders of C3 Submerged Photography

This exhibition is a photographic essay focusing on the Hawaiian humpback whale population. By the end of commercial whaling in the seventies, the numbers of whales to be seen in Hawaiian waters each year had fallen to below 500. Today, it is estimated that over 10,000 humpback whales from across the North Pacific congregate in the warm, protected waters of Hawaii each winter, to breed and raise their young calves.
