Student Academic Success & Equity Initiatives is one of the most important areas on campus. It is clear that the work done through peer mentor-ship, student leadership roles, faculty-led research, and community service projects has an enormous impact on CSUCI students. Specifically, this work contributes to the confidence and success of students. I would love to this area grow and truly feel it is incredibly necessary in order to foster the kind of campus that cares for and offers the best support for its students.

This is all very important work that has made our campus a leader in serving our students. The one suggestion I would offer to the items proposed is that, where they overlap to varying degrees with the work of the Mission Centers, that we leverage resources to amplify the efforts of both. This would be especially true in the case of the Innovating for Student Success Faculty Lead position. We do not have the resources to replicate efforts, so working intentionally with the Center for Multicultural Engagement would be important.

SASEI has funded the majority of the Articulation Systems Analyst position in our area since Nov. 2017. Without this position, we would not have been able to establish nearly as many new articulations (approx. 2,250) in the Articulation System Stimulating Interinstitutional Transfer (ASSIST) or nearly as many new articulations (1,700) in the Transfer Evaluation System (TES). Thus, I fully agree with and support the request for more funding for SASEI to help the university accomplish its GI 2025 goals, especially in areas where funding for staff positions has not yet been institutionalized.

Without SASEI's funding to hire the Articulation Systems Analyst, increased articulation would not have occurred. The position allowed us to forge forward with articulation in spite of the increased curricular demands put upon the Articulation office. Ultimately, students benefit greatly, as transfer becomes less onerous. Also, CI gains a diverse group of students. I support SASEI's request for funding.
