▼ 2. Brief Activity Description

Describe the activity and its relationships to the educational objectives of the students' program or major

Brief Activity Description

Studies in social motivation suggest that people persevere and stick to finishing difficult tasks when they see others in the room doing the same thing. This is the rationale for the group writing environment of the WMC Studio Hours, which target Juniors and Seniors in writing-intensive courses and support the timely completion of their coursework leading to graduation. Because students may find it difficult to be motivated to write without distractions, the Studio Hours will provide space, motivation, and support for maintaining best practices in the writing process so that they don't fall behind. Students are provided some light snacks and free printing to stay in our space. In addition, students have an option to receive quick writing support from a faculty consultant (teaching faculty who work at the Writing & Multiliteracy Center as a tutor) who manages the room and can provide quick feedback on writing. The faculty consultant may also collaborate with instructors to tailor support for their classes. WMC Studio Hours will be offered Mondays to Thursdays for two hours in the evening starting Week 2 in the academic semester (Sept 5) and end on Week 15 (Dec 5th). The WMC Studio Hours will provide a total of 8 hours of consultation/writing time per week with two faculty consultants during which time students can drop in or leave as desired. For the semester, the Studio Hours will provide a total of 112 hours of supported writing space for CI students.

Here is the breakdown of the Faculty Consultant's work (total: 127 hours per consultant):

--8 hours/week (12 weeks): Overseeing and tutoring during three Studio Hours sessions, which lasts two hours each. WMC Studio Hours include monitoring students, tutoring, conducting mini writing workshops. Studio Hours begin Week 2 and end Week 15.

--11 hours/semester: Professional development and preparations for the semester through orientation session, training workshops, and meetings with Faculty Director.

▼ 3. Learning Outcomes and Relation of IRA to Course Offerings

All IRAs must be integrally related to the formal instructional offerings of the University and must be associated with scheduled credit courses.

1. Please list all classes that directly relate to the proposed activity.
2. For each class listed, describe in detail how exactly the IRA activity will be integrated with the class's activities, how often/ on what expected date(s), and to what extent

Learning Outcomes and Relation of IRA to Course Offerings

Writing proficiency is central for critical thinking and understanding of coursework, but it is also crucial for satisfying CI's Graduation Writing Assessment Requirement (GWAR), which will be fulfilled through the upper division GWAR-approved courses. It is also essential for the successful and timely graduation of CI students. The WMC Writing Studio is a program that is open to all CI students, but it specifically targets upper division students to provide time, space, and support to get writing done. IRA activity (Studio Hours) supports students' metacognition of their writing process and study habits and encourages them to develop/strengthen their writing skills.

This last spring we looked at UDIGE course offerings (example list is below). For Fall, the course offerings are not available online, and we will review the course schedule for upper division courses (GWAR certified if possible) and contact those faculty.
