Brief Activity Description

Dr. Lily Anne Welty Tamai (Scholar and lecturer at UCLA) will present a lecture on the history of Japanese Americans in Ventura County. Her talk will explain this history beginning in the 1880s, and will include a discussion of the effect of internment on local Japanese communities during WWII. She will conclude with an analysis of contemporary community activism on the behalf of contemporary Japanese-American groups, as well as their advocacy in historic preservation and public history. This connects to the course objective of examining Southern California history through place, through oral histories, and through interdisciplinary texts and narratives. Further, this presentation will enable students to learn about a diverse group of immigrants who's contributions to our region are often excluded from Southern California History.
