▼ 2. Brief Activity Description

Describe the activity and its relationships to the educational objectives of the students' program or major

Brief Activity Description

This trip to Santa Rosa Island is for the Early Childhood Studies (ECS) course ECS 463, "Creating and Supporting Reciprocal Family and Community Networks" and PA 210 - "Understanding Dance & Music Elementary Education" to support interdisciplinary collaboration by providing ECS and Performing Art students the opportunity to combine narrative inquiry through course assignments that allow students opportunity for creative work through critical reflection and personal self-identity. The Instructionally Related Activities fund request for fall 2019, at the Santa Rosa Island, will create opportunity for cross cultural interaction, reflection, self-awareness, and a transformational learning experience for students. This opportunity will connect Early Childhood Studies and Performing Art students through narrative inquiry on Santa Rosa Island.

This experience will allow students to link their social and cultural identities to increased awareness of self and others through deep reflection and sharing of creative representation through movement and improvisation. The goal is for the students to participate in narrative inquiry through written and the performing art that shows the students' cultural diversity. Student reflection and self-expressed movement and improvisation will take place on Santa Rosa Island in small and large group. Written reflections will also be used to help deepen student inquiry and reflection. The purpose of this project includes students to gain deeper understanding of social and cultural identities through the experience of narrative inquiry following the learning stories (storytelling) format, expressed through movement, improvisation, and written narratives. The Santa Rosa Islands will provide the optimum environment that will support students' narrative inquiry in a prime learning setting, in a topographically diverse location and setting that will support creating a safe space to support high impact practices, while creating a culture of inquiry and build a community of learners.

Description of Assessment Process

This interdisciplinary inquiry research project will allow ECS and Performing Art students to present their narrative inquiry to each other and the CI community. Students will use the modality of movement and improvisation, along with written journal reflections to prompt deeper reflection related to the trip to Santa Rosa Island and to larger course content. The journal entries will be also used to assess the effectiveness of the visit to Santa Rosa Island. As a culminating experience for the course, students will use their research inspired experience at the Santa Rosa Island to create a final course project which includes aspects of the Santa Rosa Island trip. These projects are presented to the larger community and the ECS and Performing Art program, such as Art under the Stars, local planning council, and the educational leadership group.
