▼ 2. Brief Activity Description

Describe the activity and its relationships to the educational objectives of the students' program or major

Brief Activity Description

It is important that students interested in any of the health professions develop an appreciation regarding the impact of the environment on health status and quality of life. Students participating on this trip to Santa Rosa Island will be given the opportunity to participate in a variety of activities that will help them understand the relationship between environmental conditions and health. Students will be asked to complete an environmental assessment to identify types of exposures individual traveling or staying on the island are exposed to. The assessment may include water and air sampling. Based on the assessment, students will be asked to identify research or programmatic interventions to address the issues/concerns they have identified. In addition to environmental influences on health, students will be engaged in activities to identify environmental factors that have a positive impact on health.

▼ 8. Promoting Participation

What is your intended audience and how do you intend to market this to your students?

Nursing and Health Science students enrolled in NRS 452 and HLTH 300 will be notified about the trip via email and faculty notifications in the classroom. Students will be provided with an in-class overview of the trip including the purpose and activities they will participate in.

If this is an event that is off campus, how do you plan to bring back the benefit of this event to campus?

Students will be able to apply what they learn on the trip to their capstone projects (HS) and/or poster presentations for the Sage Research Conference (NRS & HS). By sharing their research proposal or programmatic intervention with other Health Science and Nursing students, other students will become more aware of the impact of the environment and human health. A wider audience will be reached by students who opt to develop their on-island activities for presentation at the Sage Research Conference.
