Brief Activity Description

Every spring, English 465 devotes itself to creating the CSUCI Literary Journal, publishing poetry, prose, art, and travel essays submitted and selected from the CSUCI student body, sometimes including the larger CSUCI community. This journal is printed, archived, put on our website, and distributed, for free, to the CSUCI community at the Island Fox reading at the end of Spring semester.

The Island Fox Literary Journal provides a medium for students at CSUCI to publish their own creative works. All students can submit and go through the experience of attempting to have their own work published in a small setting before leaving college as graduates, where the environment is much more arduous for publishing work. It gives students the possibility to not only leave CSUCI with published writing, but also the experience, whether rejected or accepted for publication by fellow students, of actually knowing what struggles or obstacles exist in submitting work to a body of people acting as a publishing company. The advertisement of this annual literary journal stimulates interest in the English department as a whole, if not the entire school. It exemplifies the creativity that professors hope to see in their students, and it makes that creativity something physical, something everyone can hold and read, something the school can look back on and glow with pride for.
