Brief Activity Description

This application intends to revive the Daniel Lee International Music Festival program that the Daniel Lee Memorial Scholarship Committee had arranged but was cancelled due to the global pandemic in Spring 2020.

Thanks to the support of the IRA funds in the past few years, Daniel Lee Memorial Scholarship Committee was able to invite international artists to the campus as part of the annual Daniel Lee International Music Festival. In spring 2019, Angelica Alma-ata (Portuguese guitarist and songwriter) was our featured artist. In Spring 2020, the Committee was inviting Finish cellist Jussi Makkonen and his accompanist, Nazig Azezian to visit campus, and would like to do so in the incoming International Education Week in April 2022.

The Daniel Lee Memorial International Music Festival is designed with two goals in mind. First, the festival will host a formal event that honors CI former colleague, Dr. Daniel Lee's love of music – and his love of sharing community, friendship, scholarship, and cultures through the exchange of music. Second, the event will be a fundraiser for the Daniel Lee Memorial Scholarship fund. To tie the two together, we have been collaborating with Dr. Andrea Grove at the Center for International Affairs to host the Daniel Lee International Music Festival during CI International Education Week (typically it occurs in April). The music festival aim for twin emphases: participation and exhibition. The participation emphasis draws from Daniel's love of the community, world culture, and sharing aspect of music. This emphasis seeks to draw in students (and faculty and staff and community, etc.) to contribute their own interests and talents in a week-long of open-mic events and pop-up performances in different locations on campus. The exhibition emphasis draws from Daniel's love of interest in all genres of music that came with international theme. We will seek to present renowned international artists who will bring quality music of all genres to an audience on campus.

Learning Outcomes & Relation to Course Offering

The Daniel Lee Music Fest is not tied to a particular discipline or program, but is very much linked to a number of campus wide student learning outcomes as well as to individual class objectives. The festival, like Daniel's scholarship, is informed by our mission based centers. Certainly, there is a service learning opportunity for musicians and student volunteers who will assist in making the festival happen. As mentioned, all raised proceeds will be applied to International travel opportunities for our students. Further, many of the acts and musicians will feature international music (Irish, for instance), that will create a multi-cultural experience for attendees. Last, the program of performers will be drawn from across our campus community and will display the talents of many that borrow from disciplines to the benefit of their studies, work, and creative activities. In regard to specific classes, it is clear to see the relationship between this event and Performing Arts and our International Studies programming, which can include Language, Geography, and Global Studies classes. It should be noted that this opportunity coincides nicely with the Music Program's requirement that students perform live--this festival provides a forum for PAMU students to succeed academically.

Is this activity off campus ?

No

Off Campus - Describe benefit brought back to campus

The Daniel Lee International Music Festival Week will be a series of events, lectures and performances held on campus. These events are open to the general public. Selected events will be live-streamed, broadcasted and made available to people who are not able to participated in person.
