

CIS Friday Integration Series

Spring 2021

Have you had enough social isolation? Have you had enough academic isolation? This monthly Friday series is an informal opportunity for conversation with colleagues from other disciplines about the challenges we face in teaching and researching in a time of COVID.

This Friday series is intended to be a place for people to come together to develop strategies for integration:

- Integrating teaching and research
- Integrating perspectives from various disciplines in the classroom
- Integrating perspectives from various disciplines in research (individual or team)

When: The third Friday of the month at 12-1:15 pm. This semester, we will meet on 2/19, 3/26, and 4/16.

How: CIS will collect the topic of your interest prior to the meeting date. Based on the participants' interest, we may have breakout room discussions. If we don't see a strong preference, we will have one open conversation.

What: possible prompts/questions:

- What does Integrative Studies mean to you?
- What are some of the ways that you practice Integrative Studies in your teaching and scholarship?
- What are some of the ways that you would like to develop Integrative Studies in your scholarship and teaching?
- How do you integrate your research and teaching?
- What does interdisciplinarity mean to you and how do you integrate it into your teaching and your scholarship?
- What would you like to see from the CIS to aid you in this?
- Sharing your scholarship across disciplines; make connections with colleagues around issues.
- Any other themes you would like to propose to discuss
