Mental Health & Immigration

with guest speaker Salvador D. Treviño, Ph.D. from Antioch University Santa Barbara

Wednesday, March 28, 2018 from 4 to 6 p.m. in Petit Salon

Furthering the national conversation on cultural diversity, Latino historical trauma, the psychology of racism, and matters of social justice from a psychoanalytic perspective, Treviño will discuss his research and share practical ways to better interact with our students of immigrant backgrounds. Treviño's research focuses on the impact of immigration on individuals and entire communities across generations. As we continue to educate ourselves and our campus on the issues faced by our undocumented student population, this event will supply you with the skills and tools to help undocumented students and students who are the children of immigrants who may feel uncertainty during our current political climate.
