Welcoming CHRS

Welcoming something new often begets letting something old go. Letting go is not easy so below are tips to keep in mind for welcoming change:

- Give constructive feedback as it builds system support and confidence and fosters solution-oriented thinking.
- Check-in with your team. Acknowledge that each team members' learning journey is unique.
- Be optimistic, yet real. Show support without making predictions about the system's future.
- Weigh the pros vs. cons of the system enhancement.
- Share your positive experiences with others.

Office of the Chancellor Congratulates Campuses

Ed Clark, Project Sponsor and Chief Information Officer at the Chancellor's Office, gives congratulatory remarks to the campuses on going live with the CSU's Common Human Resources System. Cal State Channel Islands as one of the first four campuses amongst Cal State Fullerton, Stanislaus State, and Cal Maritime "stand on the other side of a great demarcating line: the time before CHRS, and today having CSU's Common Human Resources System in production." The full message from Project Sponsor and Chief Information Officer Ed Clark is linked and you may read the CHRS New Release: CHRS Is Live With Four Campuses!

Cookies, Cache & Computers?

Clearing your computer devices' cookies and cache is a simple solution to difficulties with an online navigation on a website or application. Cookies and cache (pronounced "cash") store helpful data on web navigation and history. In CHRS if you are experiencing navigation issues, try resetting your internet browser or clearing stored cache and cookies. Here is a helpful guide on how to clear browser cache. CAUTION: any stored passwords or autofill information may be removed as a result of clearing cookies and cache.
