In 2012, she was a finalist for the prestigious National Book Critics Circle Awards. Her works have been published internationally in countries such as Norway and South Korea.

Her novels, Across a Hundred Mountains, (Atria, 2006) and Dancing with Butterflies (2009) were published to critical acclaim and have been read widely in schools across the country. Her latest book, The Distance Between Us, is a memoir, where she writes about her life before and after illegally immigrating from Mexico to the United States.
