Conditions and Considerations	—
Brief Activity Description	Guest lecturers , Penny Stallings and Dr. Richard Flacks, will, at different dates, lecture on their areas of expertise on the subject of the cultural revolutions of the sixties and seventies, which is the subject of our course: English/History 430 Traditions and Transformations
Learning Outcomes and Relation to IRA to Course Offerings	Students will: 1. discuss the cultural phenomenon of Woodstock with one of the organizers 2. challenge their assumptions and some of the mythologies about this iconic event 3. be able to describe the technicalities of organizing large events and hopefully use this information in their lives. 4. With Dr. Flacks, students will take part in the public discourse that assesses the cultural revolutions of the sixties and seventies: civil rights to gay rights. 5. They will articulate the broadest questions about both the progress and the backlash 6. They will integrate historical information into their assessment of our present political period. 7. They will master some of the basics of successful political organizing.
Description of Assessment Process	We will have students write reflections on the speakers or write about them for our midterm or final exam.
