Greetings Dolphins!

Welcome Dolphins! We are at the mid-way point for the semester and we are here to support you! We still have a few events lined up for the rest of the semester and we encourage you to join us, to destress and be in community.

We have some free resources and educational content for Native American Heritage Month, so make sure to check it out next time you are near the center. Also know we are here for you, and stop by if you ever need any support!

As always, if you need anything please let us know and have a great start to the semester!

In Solidarity,
Hiram Ramirez, Ph.D.

1. Set limits.
It can be easy and tempting to scroll on your phone for several hours. Try planning a set amount of social media time so you remember to fit in other activities. You could schedule an alarm on your phone or ask someone to help remind you when it's time to stop. Additionally, most mobile phones have screen time tracking apps. Remember that the limits you set for yourself will likely be different from those of your family members and friends, and that's okay! Allow yourself time to experiment and see what works best for you.

2. Curate the content.
Notice which accounts you follow and how they make you feel, both physically and emotionally. Do certain posts make you feel stressed, constrict your breathing or cause your mood to drop? It may be a good idea to stop following these accounts. At the same time, try to consider which accounts and posts help you feel relaxed, grounded, and more present.

3. Eliminate the clutter.
One of the biggest drawbacks of social media can be a large amount of content you consume at any given moment. All the different messages, photos, and videos can begin to feel overwhelming. While it can be tempting to follow all sorts of celebrities, stores, social causes, companies, and more, see if you can set a limit for the number of accounts you follow. This way you will be able to absorb and appreciate the content, rather than perhaps mindlessly scrolling through it.

4. Maintain perspective.
While filters and different editing tools can be fun to use, they can also be misleading. If you catch yourself doubting your own self-worth as you scroll through social media, try to pause, take a deep breath and remind yourself that social media does not always reflect reality.

5. Find additional online support.
Looking for more tips about how to use social media in a healthy way and/or how to address your own stress or anxiety? You can schedule a visit with a therapist on LiveHealth Online! Plus, if you're new to online therapy, read this blog from Dr. Lindsay Henderson, Director of Psychological Services with LiveHealth Online, to learn more about online therapy and how it helps people improve their mental health and cope with change.

Yuri Kochiyama

Yuri Kochiyama (May 19, 1921 – June 1, 2014) was a tireless political activist who dedicated her life to contributing to social change through her participation in social justice and human rights movements. She was born and raised in San Pedro, California. After the bombing of Pearl Harbor, her father, just out of surgery, was arrested and detained in a hospital. “He was the only Japanese in that hospital,” Kochiyama recalls, “so they hung a sheet around him that said, ‘Prisoner of War.’” He died shortly thereafter.
