Conference for Social Justice in Education

About the Conference

CI's annual Conference for Social Justice in Education highlights the essential processes of networking, of building a common agenda, and of creating opportunities for collaborative impact to achieve social justice by and through education. This year's theme, "Brave Questions: Health and Academic Achievement," is designed to broaden our perspectives on social justice as it relates to healthy learning environments, policies, practices, and student access to comprehensive school health.

The conference features keynote speakers Dianne Wilson-Graham, Executive Director of the California Physical Education-Health Project and Rigoberto Vargas, Public Health Director for the Ventura County Health Care Agency. Break-out sessions in Del Norte Hall will examine an array of issues relevant to our county and promise to be thought provoking. During lunch, participants will hear from a panel of educators who have facilitated change in the county by equipping students with the knowledge, skills and dispositions needed to create healthy lives.
