OP&C’s Theresa Kocis recognized for “CI Fire Life Safety Program”

Theresa Kocis joined the OP&C team five years ago as an electrician who also had responsibility for the fire alarm system. As one of her passions is fire safety, she started a campus safety program and has been recognized and was recently presented by President Rush with the Governor’s Employee Safety Award.

Theresa started the “CI Fire Life Safety” program on campus. The program is designed to communicate with many groups about appropriate response during fire emergencies. Her objective is educating students, staff and faculty on planning for emergencies and providing additional response direction to building occupants.

This work is completely outside her basic job functions as a campus electrician. She researched similar programs and consulted with our on-campus State Fire Marshal to develop a mission, charter and objectives, then recruited initial campus membership. Theresa has arranged ‘hands-on’ fire extinguisher training to staff, faculty and students in coordination with our extinguisher service company. Theresa was integral in establishing CAD Graphics display for alarm reporting at the Dispatch Center in Police & Parking Services. Theresa is also continuing her education and will soon receive an Associate’s Degree in Fire Science Technology focusing on prevention. Congratulations Theresa!

CI’s Sailing Club participates in its fourth Los Angeles Harbor Cup

CI’s Sailing Club competed in its fourth Los Angeles Harbor Cup. The Club competes in the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate Sailing Conference against universities across the West Coast. Focusing on rebuilding in 2010 after a number of Club sailors graduated, CI’s team continues to grow in numbers and enthusiasm. The Club practices at Channel Islands Harbor in Oxnard and competes in offshore regattas throughout Southern and Northern California.

The CI Sailing Club is anchored by team captain Andrew Domingos (jib and spin). In addition to Andrew, returning Harbor Cup competitors include Kevin Schallert (main), Andrew Healy (jib), Hayley Bracken (pit) and Cameron Demaranville (foredeck). The team also includes freshman Greg Dair (skipper) and Tim Fedderson (mast), and Lisa Marchand (alternate). The team is coached by volunteer Mike O’Neil, assisted by team alumni Nick de Rouhlac and Austin Dias, and supported by advisor Steve Lefevre.

Summit Researches Minority Use of National Parks

Four CI students and Tracylee Clarke, Assistant Professor of Communication, attended a research summit at Yosemite National Park, sponsored by the National Parks Promotion Council. The interdisciplinary team also includes Don Rodriguez, Associate Professor of Environmental Science & Resource Management and Jose Alamillo, Associate Professor of Chicana/o Studies, and was established as part of a recent grant from the Santa Monica Mountains Fund, http://www.csuci.edu/news/releases/2011_nationalparkservice.htm. The summit helped researchers discover what studies have been done and what might still need to be done to make the National Parks relevant to 18-25 year-old minority students and to find out why minorities aren’t using the National Parks.

On Friday, April 8 from 12–5 p.m., the research team would like to invite CI Latina/o students to join them on a field trip, hike and lunch to Newton Falls in the Santa Monica Mountains.

CI practices the art of “Xeriscaping”

Xeriscaping, pronounced “zeer-escape-ing”, essentially is the art, process and development of establishing a water-wise landscape. The term xeriscaping calls upon the images of stripping out the “green” and adding desert like qualities—cacti, sand, and rocks; however, it offers a more colorful plant option, ranging from shrubs to grasses, trees, and even flowers.

Each region of California has different resource conditions, such as available water, soil type, temperature ranges, and lighting. When designing a landscape, it is more sustainable to select drought tolerant plants, and install efficient irrigation systems.

CI uses xeriscaping in the front and back of the John Spoor Broome Library. Behind the Library, there are plants that are native to the Mediterranean climate in which CI is located, and thus are adapted to the local rainfall. In the front of the library, there are Californian and Mexican desert plants. Due to the adaption of these plants to this region, less water is needed; therefore, CI installed low precipitation rate spray heads.

Back to Basics Five Year Reunion

A reunion was held on Friday, March 11 in Salon A to recognize the fifth annual Back to Basics Student Leadership Retreat. Back to Basics is grounded in the concepts of basic training and boot camp. Students are brought “back to the basics” of leadership by engaging in learning objectives related to discipline, delegation, communication, teamwork, professionalism and motivation through interactive squad activities. The retreat consists of leadership development workshops presented by CI student affairs professionals and basic training-style leadership exercises led by the retreat general and Vice President of Student Affairs, Wm. Gregory Sawyer. After attending this retreat, students continue to report that they have a greater level of self-confidence and a strong sense of achievement.

Fifty students (former cadets) attended the reunion that featured a keynote address from “General Sawyer” and moving speeches delivered by a student representative from each class that expressed what they had learned from the retreat. Rebecca Torres, a class speaker from Back to Basics III (2008-2009) said, “I recognized that day [during the retreat], that no matter how many times I thought I failed at something, I had no choice but to pick my head up and try again.”
